MONDAY MAY 31, 1875

The Jeremiahs-Virginia. With all kind feeling and sincerity we suggest that there are a few Jeremians in the Virginia press who are drawing metancholy pictures of this State that we are sure are extravagant, and that we know are doing a vast deal of harm. We do not question their motives, but we' know the effects of their mournful representations to be disastrous.

Respectable papers are speaking with great positiveness about the utter inability of the people to do this and that, or to do more than this or that. Now, we cannot see how anybody can speak very positively on the subject of the capacity of the people to meet any trial and triumph over any difficulty. But what would be the use of it if they could?

We see some of these same well-meaning gentlemen exerting all their influence in favor of immigration. They were for liberal aid to the cause from the State Treasury, and for a system of boards and agencies that was to lay before the world the bright attractions of Virginia. What! of an impoverished State? with a prostrate industry? a feeble commerce? a despondent people? Is such the State these enthusiastic advocates of immigration are inviting people to come to?

We trust the painters of gloomy pictures will see that these are not the best for the market. We hope they will see that there is no use in painting such pictures at allthey can find no sale.

We do trust that the people of Virginia will desire their and our good friends not to continue their attempts to explain the congood to the State and none to the people; for the State and the people are one and the same. If these gentlemen think they are taking one single step towards relieving the taken. That is not the way to invite newcomers. People with money and energy don't want to move to the home of beggars-they would rather live with energetic, lively, hopeful, and rising people. Can we expect them to covet lands that can't pay taxes? Oh no, never.

We know that the extremely despondent stories-nay, even the moderately despondcut ones- are not true. They do those concerned injury, and retard the recovery of the State. Better maintain "a straight shirt-tail and a stiff upper lip." These are the things which arouse the vigor and incite the aid of Virginia has had more means and more energy the ten years since our war than she had during the ten years after the close of the war of 1812. We have had ways to market which we had not then; and we have had stimulants to activity and production that were not known then. Indeed, Danville was then as far from Richmond in time as London is, and farther than San Francisco is now. The means for enterprise and for the rapid conversion of all necessaries of life into cash are all the world to nothing compared with the almost utter want of means that then restrained the industry of the rapid specific for the rapid conversion of all necessaries of life.

Where is the ground for lamentation now? If we be true to ourselves, persevering and hopeful, we will all the more rapidly get out of our difficulties; but moping, and complaining, and depreciating our own power and energies, can only result in our own in-

We say that many sincere but mistaken persons are too much given to drawing these dolorous pictures. Demagogues and officehunters who want to get office by appearing as the "people's" friends use those pictures for their own selfish purposes, and the peonie are the sufferers.

Let us be stout and hopeful. Virginia is the State of greatest resources. Her people came of a glorious ancestry, and should be unsurpassed for energy and determination, while their character should be altogether unimpeachable for integrity and honor. Virginia can do anything!

Comedy of Inculpation.

The General of the Armies in his book takes occasion to reproduce the extravagant ex t-ression of his bitterness toward. Mr. Davis, indulged in the conscious freedom from responsibility that power and position gave. The General has the art of poisoning a shaft. It was not enough that he should throw a suspicion on Mr. Davis that he had a knowledge of the madman's purpose to RATES: and sought to make the odium of that supposed knowledge the greater by putting Mr. DAVIS and GEORGE SANDERS together. Poor GEORGE! He had his visionary schemes and crotchets, but he was a kind-hearted person, and would not take food from a starving

It the General of the Armies desired to do himself an injury in the estimation of the world be could not have done better than to reproduce the innuendo concerning Mr. Davis so long after the war, and when the whole world knows that Mr. Davis was as innocent of all knowledge of the assassination of Mr. Lincoln as was General Shek-MAN himself. He repeats what he said to MARLES amon: them. He can be seen at DIPNER'S stable corner of now as a case illustrating how to suspicious and highly-prejudiced persons "trifles light as air" are "confirmation strong as proofs of Holy Writ." It is more curious than seri- Also, good b ous, and by reason of the exposure to which it is now subjected it is more criminal than respectable. We were just thinking that even now a Nittle theory in the line of the farce of inculpatrion might be constructed for amusement as we'll as for the sake of a moral. Amongst the absurdest of absurd things a rumor has been put infloat that Grant has been fearfully threatened with fatal consequences should be decline to come out against a third term. Now, Montgomery Blair charges Sherman with being a hater of Grant. We all know how be can bate,—how he hated

JOHN F. BURCH. moreover, a Republican and a hater of Casarism. Here is matter for theorizing and spicing over the "comedy of inculpation."

Who knows but that Grant may grow a little more serious in contemplating the field and considering his own safety? grom the Radical accounts he takes the threat with enough seriousness to make it bear upon his conduct. He is as bold as Falstaff, and will make no concession as to reasons though they were as plenty as blackberries. Indeed, it is plain that he will take the presidency for a third term rather than decline it in face of an impudent threat! How would SHER-

MAN like that? We think these little divertisements are not unbealthful. The comedy is a good thing after the tragedy. SHERMAN is injecting into it a good deal of raciness and some frresistible contretemps that will vastly heighten the public erjoyment.

In a letter to the Philadelphia Telegrap from London," Dexter," speaking of the Royal Academy exhibition, says:

"It were unsatisfactory to omit allusion to the single large piece of statuary the exhibition contains. The late academician Feley's standing figure of Stonewall Jackson is of the heroic size, in bronze, and has been commissioned by British admirers of the de ceased Confederate chieftain for presentation to Virginia. Of the portrait I am not qualidition of the State. Their views do no fier to speak; but the execution is good, the pose and bearing are firm and characteristic. and the whole figure is all but instinct with life and animation. The General is attired in the uniform of his rank, and its simplicity barmon zes well with the expressive cast of people by representing them as poor and features, while attention would only be diheavily weighted they are egregiously mis. verted from the countenance, through which, being dead, he yet breath s and speaks, by superfluous decorations or any novelty of
